Welcome to the Port of New Bedford

New Bedford is the world's most famous whaling era seaport, the number one commercial fishing port in America, and the premier location to assemble, construct, deploy, operate and maintain industrial offshore wind.

While our history is rich both on land and at sea, it is the city's future that excites leaders in business, development, government, and education. Each day my Administration works closely with the private sector to spur economic growth. All of us recognize that new development in a growing economy creates jobs that can enable families to build homes, send their children to college, and otherwise pursue the American Dream.

My administration has spent considerable effort and resources to guide economic development. We have focused on cultivating an export-based economy by leveraging the city's assets—none more critical than our working waterfront. Today, the Port of New Bedford is home to over 200 maritime businesses, a commercial fleet of 500 fishing vessels, two inter-island ferry services, an active cargo shipping industry, a newly established IoT lab, a cruising industry, bulk and break-bulk cargo facilities, and numerous shipyards and vessel repair facilities.

We have sought to take a regional, metropolitan-based approach to development while emphasizing the centrality of the city and our working waterfront in the region's identity. We also are elevating the city's quality of life through school reform, urban beautification, and more effective municipal management.

I believe that all of these efforts help to create the environment needed for private sector investment and transformative development throughout the City, and our recent track record of success is delivering value to our private sector partners, residents, and visitors.

Our talented maritime workforce, development potential, and prime location along Buzzards Bay creates excellent opportunities for business relocation, growth, and development.

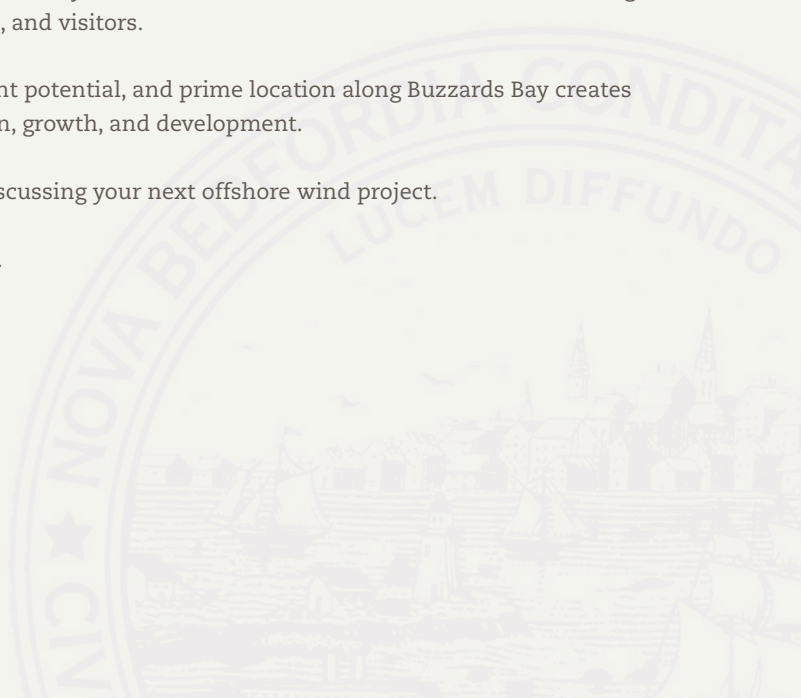

I thank you for your interest, and welcome discussing your next offshore wind project.

Please enjoy all that New Bedford has to offer.

Sincerely,

MAYOR, CITY OF NEW BEDFORD

The City of New Bedford must be a place where opportunity abounds for all its residents. We each have our roles to play in realizing this vision. These guiding principles between the City and the private and public partners who invest here ensure that expectations of both parties are clear and that economic opportunities are available for all New Bedford companies and workers – with a specific focus on creating opportunities for the city’s minority and women owned businesses, veterans, and workers. We believe we can accomplish these goals through good faith, strong communication, and clear expectations.

Guiding Principles For Investment In New Bedford

- Trust: The City of New Bedford seeks to be a trusted and effective partner to the private and public entities that invest and do business in the city.
- Local Benefit: The City of New Bedford seeks to connect the maximum amount of New Bedford businesses and workers, with an emphasis on the city’s minority and women owned businesses, veterans, and workers, to the economic opportunities occurring across the city, creating more local jobs and enhancing the community wide benefits of economic investments.
- Equal Opportunity: The City of New Bedford is committed to ensuring that a system is in place for all New Bedford companies and workers across our diverse city to competitively and transparently compete for economic opportunities.
- Collaboration: The City of New Bedford is committed to utilizing these guiding principles as a shared framework to guide investors to hire locally, spend locally and be good corporate citizens – while creating a platform by working with local companies and workers to compete, innovate and benefit from economic activities occurring in the city.

The City Of New Bedford’s Commitment To Investment Partners

- Clearly communicate the expectations of the city to its partners through forums and outreach.
- Provide public sector services to economic development partners in a timely, professional and highly effective manner.
- Provide each partner with access to a clearinghouse of information on New Bedford companies and workers who can compete for contracts and employment opportunities.
- Work with partners to utilize tax increment financing (TIF) assistance in ways that honor local hiring and local content goals and recognize best efforts of partners to meet these goals.
- Monitor and assist each partner’s efforts to meet local hiring and local contracting goals.

Investment Partners’ Commitment To The City Of New Bedford

- Pledge their best effort to hire qualified New Bedford residents for job openings in the city.
- Pledge their best effort to contract qualified New Bedford companies for services that can be delivered at a high level of quality, on time and on budget.
- Pledge to be transparent and open with the city about project timelines as well as local spending and local hiring goals.
- Pledge to open opportunities for workers.
- Pledge to support local causes and organizations whenever possible, and to be a good corporate citizen interested in the future growth of the City of New Bedford.

The New Bedford Marine Commerce Terminal

The New Bedford Marine Commerce Terminal is a multi-purpose facility designed to support the construction, assembly, and deployment of offshore wind projects, as well as handle bulk, break-bulk, container shipping and large specialty marine cargo. The first of its kind in North America, the terminal has been engineered to sustain mobile crane and storage loads that rival the highest load-bearing ports in the nation.

By land, the terminal may be accessed via Interstate 1-95 or I-495 (via connections through New Bedford Route 18 and MA Route 140 and/or Route I-195). The terminal is also located in close proximity to the federal offshore wind energy areas along the East Coast.

The New Bedford Marine Commerce Terminal's high capacity quayside is supported by a complex system of cofferdams, a pile-supported marginal wharf and geotechnically-competent, dense aggregate that allows for heavy uniform and concentrated loads.

Whereas many ports have a small quayside area specifically designated as the single hard point, over 21 acres of the New Bedford Marine Commerce Terminal's main terminal site has the ability to sustain uniform loads of 4,100 pounds per square foot (20 metric tons per square meter) and concentrated loads of up to 20,485 pounds per square foot (100 metric tons per square meter). This loading capacity allows for cranes of all sizes to be mobile throughout the site, increasing the efficiency of the work and providing logistical flexibility. The terminal is capable of supporting a 1,350 metric ton crane lifting a 500 metric ton load at 30 meters along the entire 1,000-foot (305-meter) new bulkhead and throughout the more than 21-acre main facility.

Terminal Features

- 26-acre facility with a 1,200-foot quayside and a new 300-foot wide navigational channel dredged to -30 feet MLLW
- Free of overhead restrictions
- Work and security level lighting allow for around-the-clock activities within the Designated Port Area
- Ship-to-shore power outlets along the bulkhead
- Expandable electrical system, including a 3,000 amp, 480/277V, 3 phase, 4 wire system
- Fire protection, potable water and waste water disposal capabilities
- State-of-the-art vega sector lights installed along the hurricane barrier to enhance vessel navigation

To use or lease the terminal, please contact newbedfordterminal@masscec.com

A Full Service Port

With over 350 years of maritime history, it is no surprise that today New Bedford is one of the most important commercial ports on the East Coast. From its whaling days to its current position as the nation's number one fishing port in terms of value of catch, to its future as a major hub for industrial scale offshore wind and an intermodal shipping center, the Port of New Bedford has been and will always be a working port.

The Port serves as the city's greatest natural resource and most critical asset to stimulate investment, attract new industry, create jobs and develop a healthy economy. Over 6,200 people are employed by New Bedford's commercial port. New Bedford is the number one value fishing port in the nation generating direct business revenues of $3.3 billion and a total economic impact of $9.8 billion, representing 2% of the state's GDP.

Today, the busy Port of New Bedford is home to over 200 maritime businesses, a commercial fleet of 500 fishing vessels, two inter-island ferry services, an active cargo shipping industry, a cruising industry, bulk and break-bulk cargo facilities, and numerous shipyards and vessel repair facilities.

Ferry services are available in the port, including passenger and cargo service to Cuttyhunk Island and passenger service to Martha's Vineyard. Launch, water taxi, and charter boat services also operate in the port.

"Deepwater Wind looks forward to working closely with Mayor Mitchell and the port community, as together we build a new industry in the region. New Bedford is perfectly positioned to be a key player in the emerging offshore wind industry."

MATT MORRISSEY, DEEPWATER WIND - VICE PRESIDENT, MASSACHUSETTS

Like many modern working ports, New Bedford/Fairhaven Harbor balances maritime interests and local economic needs with environmental concerns. Several economic and environmental designations, such as the Foreign Trade Zone and No Discharge Area, currently apply to the port.

The Port of New Bedford is currently undertaking a more than $200 million commercial makeover: deepening channels and berths as well as repairing and enlarging maritime terminals and wharves to accommodate the needs of the growing shipping and emerging offshore wind industries. With excellent road, vessel, and rail connections to New England, the nation, and the world, New Bedford is poised to become a leading intermodal port into the 21st century and beyond.

Access to Supply Chain

The US supply chain for offshore wind builds upon a national supply chain that addresses the needs and requirements of the robust and expanding land-based wind energy industry. The Port of New Bedford and Massachusetts Clean Energy Center have identified and pre-qualified an existing US supply chain with the basic quality, safety, bonding, and documentation required by prime contractors in offshore wind. These include: pier-side services, at-sea services, equipment suppliers, materials, consumables, and supplies.

The US Department of Energy maintains a national wind supply chain database and GIS Wind Supply Chain Map that includes offshore wind supply chain needs. Massachusetts companies that are recognized as capable of supplying the wind industry are represented on the current database and GIS Offshore Wind Supply Chain Map.

The New Bedford Wind Energy Center and Bristol Community College have proposed a research effort to update the GLWN study; generate a customized analysis of the three leaseholder's projected port, logistics and supply chain requirements and produce a comprehensive assessment of the alignment of Massachusetts ports and advanced manufacturing ecosystem specifically (now and in the future) with those identified needs.

New Bedford is taking a regional approach to supply chain development. The Port of New Bedford is home to over 200 maritime businesses, including an active cargo shipping industry, a cruising industry, bulk and break-bulk cargo facilities, numerous shipyards and vessel repair facilities, as well as significant fishing and ferrying operations.

New Bedford offers a readily accessible uncongested exit off the marine highway. New Bedford is a deep-water intermodal port with easy access to the maritime corridor from the Atlantic coast and European ports, located at a key juncture of Short Sea and International Shipping Routes. The port is approximately 25 nautical miles from the MAWEA, and has excellent direct access to interstate highways (I-95, I-93, Route 128, 140 and 195), as well as rail, and air connections (New Bedford Regional Airport) to major US and European supply chain hubs.

Designated Port Area

The Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management has classified portions of the waterfront in New Bedford and Fairhaven as a Designated Port Area (DPA) under a program to preserve and promote maritime industry. The DPA classification encourages the creation or expansion of water-dependent industrial facilities in developed harbor areas. DPAs are subject to specific provisions, including land use restrictions, under Massachusetts General Law Chapter 91, which is administered by the state's Department of Environmental Protection. DPAs also are officially identified as priority areas for federal and state funding, including funds available under the Seaport Bond.

Hurricane Barrier

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) is a federal agency responsible for the operation and maintenance of the New Bedford Hurricane Barrier, including the opening and closing of the two hurricane doors that guard the main shipping channel leading into the Harbor. USACE officials decide when the gates will be closed (i.e., when hurricanes threaten or for other severe weather, including coastal storms or strong high tides) and reopened. (See the Hurricane Plan for Recreational Boaters). The Hurricane Barrier stretches across the water from the south end of New Bedford to the Town of Fairhaven. The barrier's 150-foot opening closes during hurricane conditions and coastal storms making the Harbor one of the safest hubs on the eastern seaboard.

IoT Impact LABS

Impact LABS is a field-pilot-based IoT accelerator launched by INEX Advisors in downtown New Bedford, only a few short blocks from the working waterfront. Their goal is to enhance and accelerate learning about, investing in and value creation from IoT with small and mid-sized businesses (SMBs) operating in 'grand challenge' markets. LABS brings together world-class IoT startups, Tier 1 technology and industrial suppliers and legal and policy experts to define and test intelligent, intentional approaches to instrumenting the physical world. Their pilot sites are the most innovative public and private SMBs throughout New England operating in Smart Cities, Food/Agriculture, Water/Maritime, Energy and Transportation Markets.
